Construction of the 20,000 square foot center is scheduled to begin this fall, with a Spring, 1972 completion date. The shopping center derives its name from its location which is across from USC.

Ground has been broken for the first new shopping facilities to be built along Vermont Ave. in the Hoover Redevelopment Project according to Community Redevelopment Agency officials.

Named "Campus Center," the junior-size shopping center is valued at approximately a half-million dollars. It will contain approximately 20,000 square feet of commercial space and will include a market, restaurant and related retail facilities.

The site, a 1.5-acre parcel, is on Vermont Ave., between 36th St., and 36th Pl., near the USC campus. Prior to redevelopment, the area previously contained a collection of small retail businesses, congested together on the old "Vermont Strip."

Under a participation agreement recently approved by the Community Redevelopment Agency board, "Campus Center" will be developed by a community-based local development company.
